

I'm sure every kid has pretended to shoot another child, and I know that they all learned that from one place, the media. However, it is truly the parent's responsibility to regulate what their children watch or at least explain the realities of it to them. I think the v-chip and program ratings should be giving parents more than enough help to keep their children safe.